Pregnancy and deliveries at risk

"My name was Calliste, and my beauty justified it.
I was about a year into my fifteenth year.
I was pleasing to my master and loved by both my parents.
The seventh day of my illness was also my last.
The cause of my death is unknown, though it is said to be childbirth, But whatever it was, I did not deserve to go so soon. »

Rome, Via Appia

« The father must make a gesture to accept the child into his family. When the child is on the ground, he must pick it up from underneath and raise it in his arms. The physical birth is not essential, and as long as the child is on the ground it is non-existent; it is the father's gesture that calls it into true existence. »

J.-P. Néraudau, Etre enfant à Rome, Paris, 1984, p. 210
